30 YEARS

Our Mission:

To foster academic, social, and emotional growth for children living in low-income communities around metro Denver.

Our Vision:

An unwavering commitment to empower students to achieve academic and personal success.

In 1993, there was a first grader named Chanel at Hallett Elementary. Chanel was a struggling reader, and the teacher who was set to have her in second grade was fearful she would not be successful. Inspired to creatively find ways to support Chanel and other students like her, Paul Hamilton, the school principal, and volunteer Cyndi Kahn worked to develop a solution that would come to be the first Summer Scholars program. Fast forward 30 years, what began as working alongside 20 students that summer has grown to serving over 800 scholars year round in four school districts (Denver, Aurora, Westminster and Sheridan).

"The reason we keep sending our kids to Scholars After School is because we want them to be able to do something after school that keeps them engaged. It can be a big financial burden paying for after school programs, so we appreciate there's an option available that is worthwhile, provides activities that helps them develop, and it is an affordable."

- Charnell, Scholars Unlimited Parent
